MRA FILMS SHOWN IN QUE QUE

TWO years ago, people in Kenya said, "God help us if Jomo Kenyatta comes into power," but, today, they are saying, "God help us if that man dies", Mr. Bremer Hofmeyr, leader of the Moral Re-Armament movement in Africa, told an audience invited by St. Stephen's Church to see the showing of the MRA film, "The Crowning Experience", last week.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hofmeyr spoke of the urgent need for a revolutionary change in the white people if we are to avoid warfare more horrible than that experienced in Kenya.

Through Moral Re-Armament, a new spirit lived in Kenyatta and he was determined to forget all hatred, bitterness and prejudice, said Mr. Hofmeyr.

Mrs. Hofmeyr's father was buried alive as a human sacrifice by the Mau Mau.

At a showing of another MRA film, "Freedom", at the Jewish Communal Hall, Mr. McCall, of Salisbury, said that Mr. Kenyatta was so impressed by the film that a Swahili version was made. The film, in both English and Swahili, has already been shown to over 600,000 people right across Kenya.

The very simple idea behind the film is: "If you want the world to be a better place, the best place to start with is yourself". It shows how the ordinary man and the statesman can each play their part in bringing an answer to the world.

The film is based on a play by an African and tells of the struggle of the masses in an African country against the "imperialistic Colonial powers". Those taking part — like Dr. Nkomo of Pretoria — are not actors, but are living their own convictions, and because of this, they give sincere and moving performances.

No doubt there will be demands for this impressive film to be shown here again to a wider audience—as it deserves to be.
