

Charm of young voices

SELDOM has a Port Elizabeth audience been so positively captured by a group of singing youngsters as they were by members of the touring Springbok Stampede in the Crispin Hall last night.

The show started slowly, the audience not quite certain how to react to the youngsters' singing.

After the interval their polished performance soon had them enthralled. At the end the group had the crowd joining in and calling for more.

The happy group deserved a bigger audience. All in all, the show is well worth attending.
